

James F. Duggan

James Duggan was raised in Chicago, IL and spent many of his summers sailing on Buzzard's Bay in Massachusetts. It was there that he developed an interest in America's Cup racing and combined his passion for painting with his love of sailing and the rocky coast of New England.

He spent many years photographing and observing cloud and weather patterns for his paintings. His backgrounds are as dramatic, creative and realistic as the ships themselves and create a feeling of movement and a sense of place.

James received his formal art training at The School of The Art Institute in Chicago. Now living on Chicago's North side, he is represented almost exclusively in private collections throughout the country.